

Title: The Creepy House

I saw a house that looked cool. I decided to go in. When I entered I saw... a lot of things. There was an enormous television set, a pale and creamy-coloured sofa. There was also a rug on the floor with beautiful, swirly patterns. The floor was polished, and everything looked perfect. But it did look a bit creepy...

I decided to go inside one of the bedrooms to explore. I entered it and stood in one place, frozen. I was so shocked at what I saw, there was a bed, a grand one, and another television set. There was a... shelf full of magic toys! The difficult puzzles were doing themselves! Then, I saw something even more marvellous... a golden bag filled with gold coins was refilling itself, and almost bursted open. I quickly stuffed them inside my pocket. Then, a green light glowed.

A merry pixie danced around the room, saying, "Hi! I'm your servant!" I gaped in surprise, as he brought me bars and bars of chocolate, my favourite food in the world. I couldn't help smiling, though I was a bit scared. Suppose he followed me home? I became even more scared. Then, suddenly, I asked, "Can I make you disappear?" "Of course," answered the pixie, smiling. "Just put me in a pot first, then put boiling water inside. Then stir me..." At last, he was finished.

I heard him clearly. As I threw him into the cauldron, (that was like a pot,) he shouted, "Hey what are you doing?" "Just making you disappear." I said. "Help!" he yelled. I didn't care and kept doing the things he said until his voice faded away. I crept away from the house quietly, never daring to go in again. I was very scared of it.

I still had the gold coins in my pocket and I used them wisely. I never went to a creepy house from that day onwards.
